

UK News

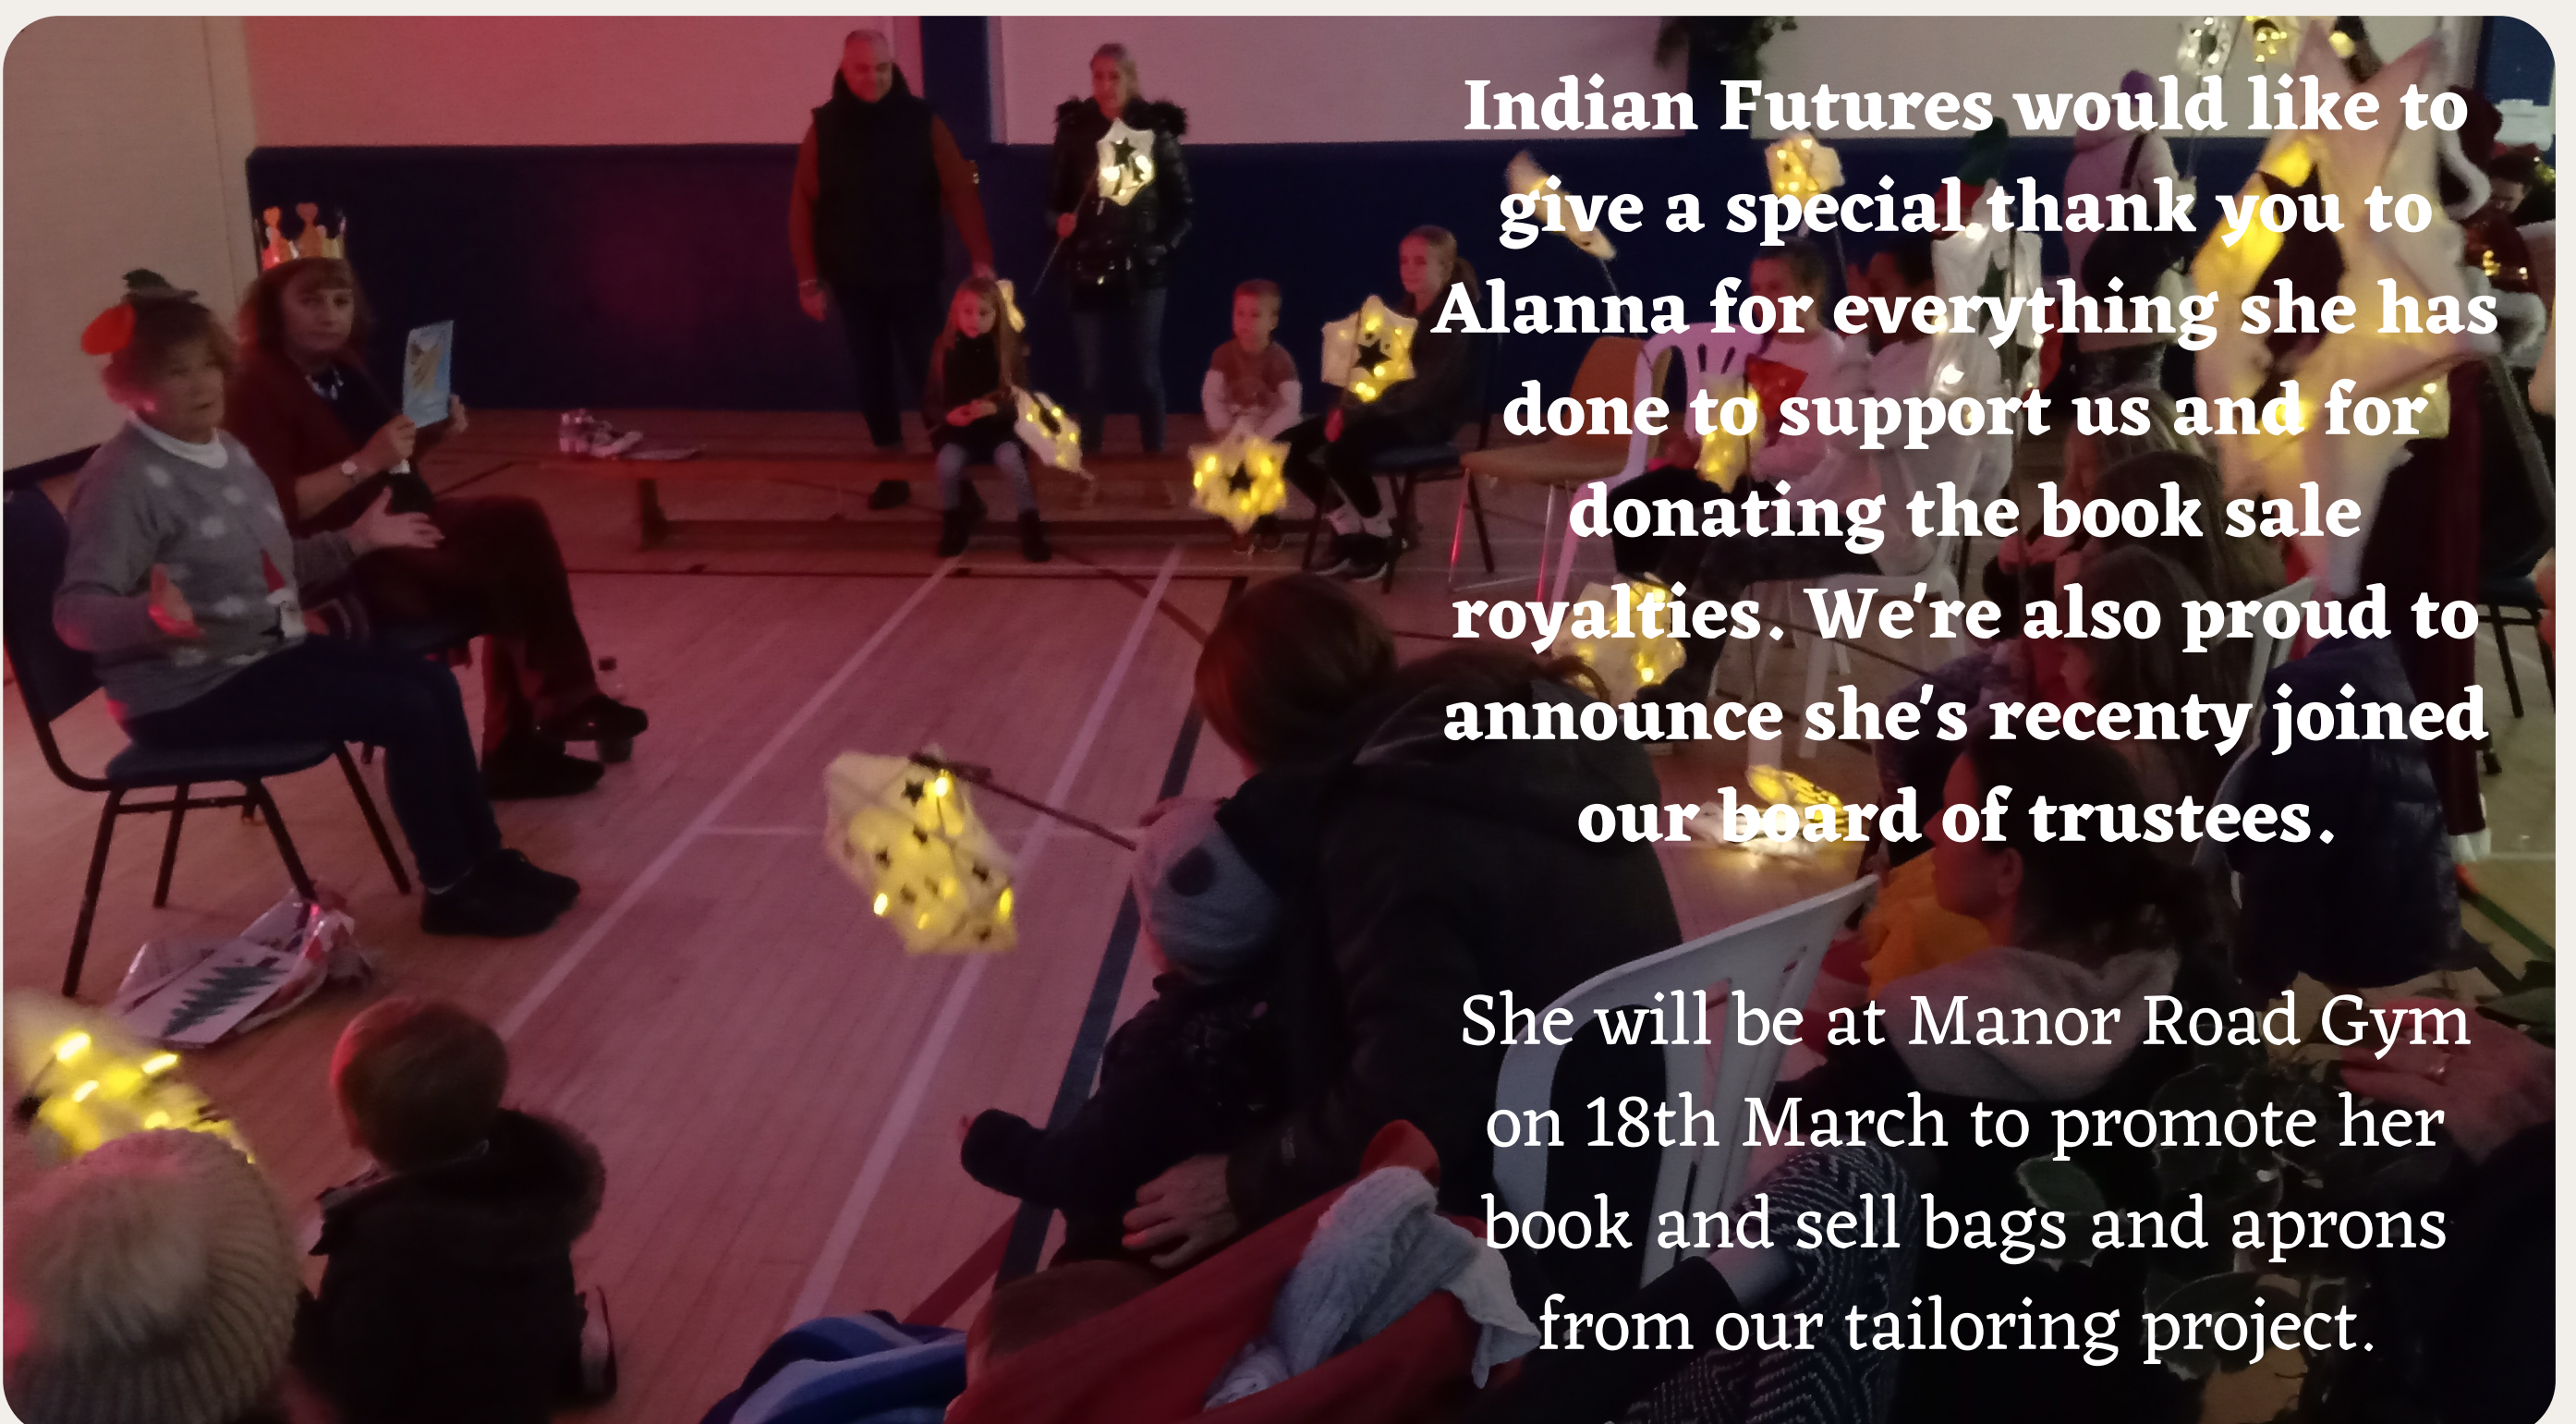

Our dearest poet and fierce Indian Futures supporter, Alanna McIntyre, has just published her fourth book, 'Slices of Sky and Sea'. The book is an eclectic collection of thoughts, poems, news, reflections and many other surprises that Alanna brings to her readers, sharing with us her fascinating colourful view of the world. Her book can be purchased on Amazon.

Alanna's Book Release

Indian Futures would like to give a special thank you to Alanna for everything she has done to support us and for donating the book sale royalties. We're also proud to announce she's recently joined our board of trustees.

She will be at Manor Road Gym on 18th March to promote her book and sell bags and aprons from our tailoring project.

IT Centres

Our 3 IT centres in Kanjanur, Thandarai Pettai and Chitiraikoodam, allow students to gain computer skills and develop their learning. Donors and fundraising help to train teachers, pay for their salaries, provide computers, desks and chairs and continue running the centres.

Sponsorship Programme

Rural Indian women have fewer chances to reach further education than men. However, many Indian women dream about studying beyond compulsory education and having a career.

The sponsorship programme funds the university fees and transport of 14 female students from the most deprived areas of rural Tamil Nadu.

Tailoring Project

Our self-sustainable project involves the recycling of material from old saris to make aprons, surkupeis (Indian fabric purses) and other bags. Funds from the sales pay for the tailoring, postage expenses, and towards other Indian Futures projects.
